

Families Affected

- ≤ 1 000
- 1 001 - 8 000
- 8 001 - 9 000
- 9 001 - 10 000

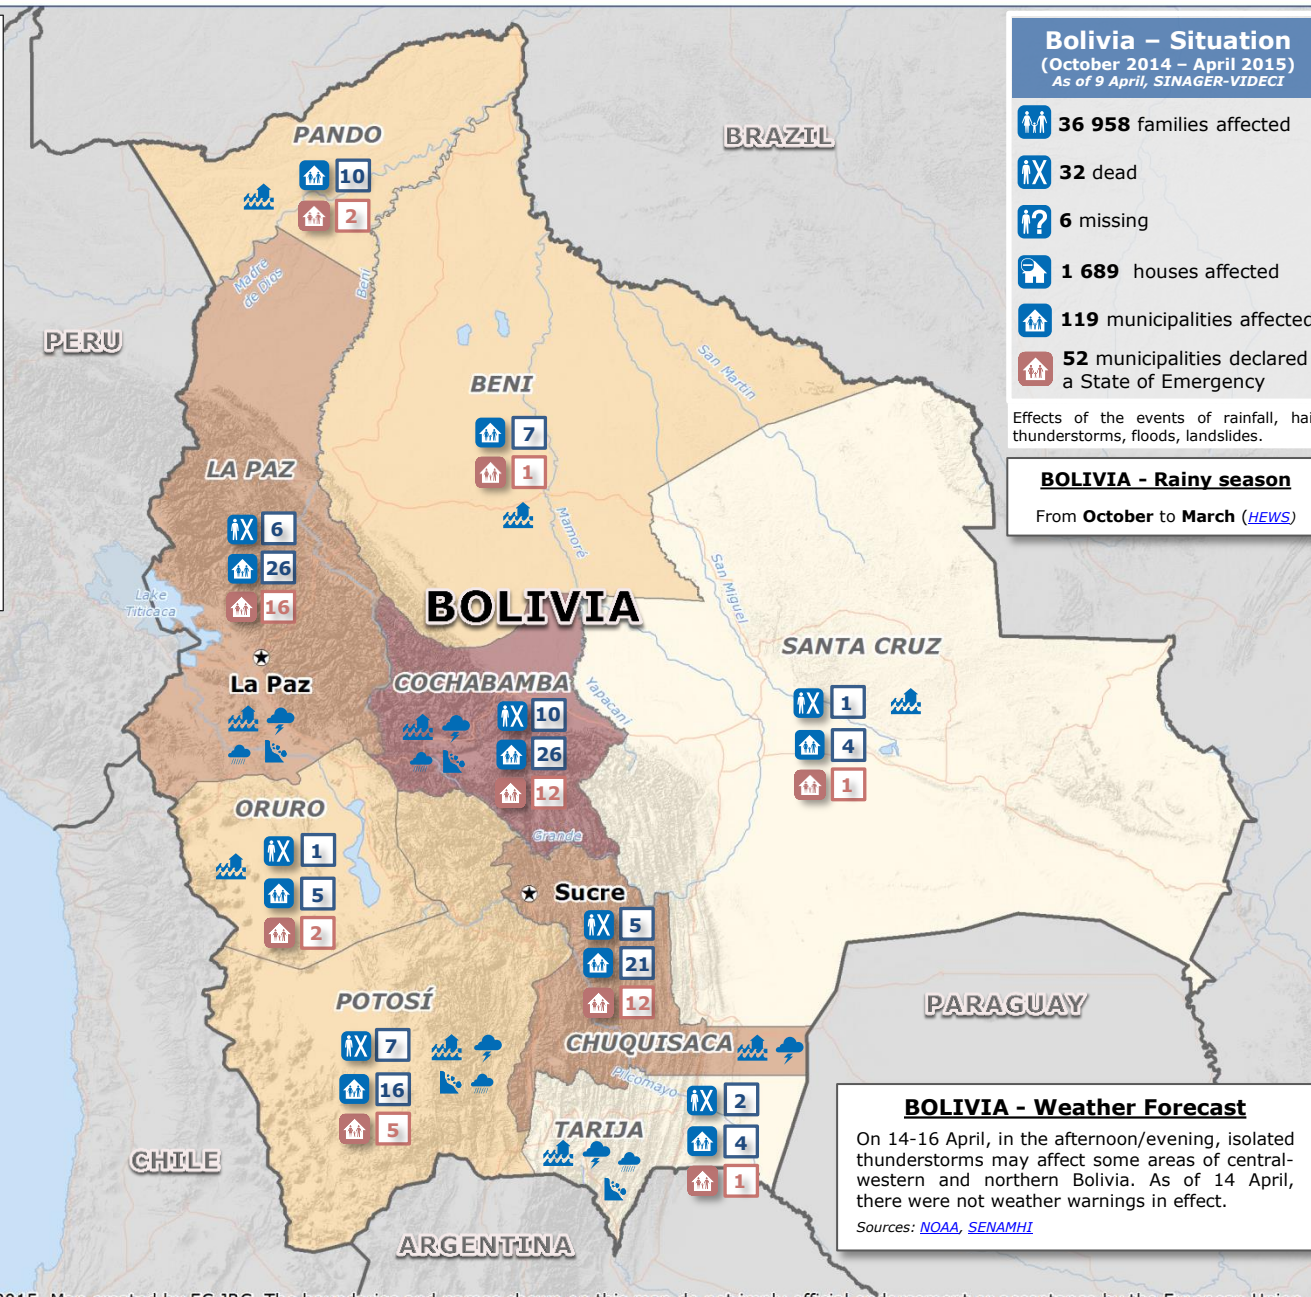

Death

Municipalities

- Affected
- State of Emergency declared

Type of event occurred in each department

- Thunderstorm / hail
- Flood / river overflow
- Heavy rainfall
- Landslide
- Major rivers
- Main roads
- Department boundary
- International border

Bolivia – Situation

(October 2014 – April 2015)
As of 9 April, SINAGER-VIDECI

- 36 958 families affected
- 32 dead
- 6 missing
- 1 689 houses affected
- 119 municipalities affected
- 52 municipalities declared a State of Emergency

Effects of the events of rainfall, hail, thunderstorms, floods, landslides.

BOLIVIA - Rainy season
From October to March (HEWS)

BOLIVIA – Severe weather

Since October 2014 (beginning of the rainy season) heavy rain, hail, thunderstorms, floods and landslides have affected several areas of Bolivia, causing deaths and damage. According to the latest SINAGER-VIDECI report (as of 9 April 2015), 119 municipalities in nine departments have been affected, with in total 37 000 families affected and 32 dead. As of 9 April, 52 municipalities have declared a «State of Emergency».

Source: Gov. Of Bolivia, Redhum

RECENT RAINY SEASONS in BOLIVIA

Rainy season: From October to March

Every year, during the rainy season, the severe weather causes damage and affects several families across the country. The number of families affected by the most recent rainy seasons are shown below (the figures of the current rainy season are in RED).

Sources: UN OCHA (1,2), REDLAC (1,2,3,4,5), UN, VIDECI

BOLIVIA - Weather Forecast

On 14-16 April, in the afternoon/evening, isolated thunderstorms may affect some areas of central-western and northern Bolivia. As of 14 April, there were not weather warnings in effect.

Sources: NOAA, SENAMHI